Before joining the SFC, Mark was Deputy Executive Director, Enforcement, with the Australian Securities and Investments Commission. He has been involved in corporate, financial services and securities regulation since 1987 in Australia, Hong Kong and in the UK, specialising in investigatory work and resulting litigation. He completed a law degree at the University of Melbourne in 1989, and has practised extensively in Australian courts.

DANIEL TARULLO

Nomura Professor of International Financial Regulatory Practice
Harvard Law School

Daniel K. Tarullo served as a member of the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Open Market Committee from January 2009 to April 2017. As oversight governor for supervision and regulation, he led the Board's financial regulatory reforms, including implementation of the Dodd-Frank Act. He was the Federal Reserve's representative to the international Financial Stability Board, including four years as chair of its Committee on Supervision and Regulation. From 2015 to 2017 he was also Chair of the interagency Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council. In his monetary policy-making role on the Federal Open Market Committee, he often focused on developments in labor markets and on the relationship between monetary policy and financial stability.

Tarullo had extensive government and academic experience prior to his nomination to the Federal Reserve. From 1993 to 1998, he served, successively, as Assistant Secretary of State for Economic and Business affairs, Deputy Assistant to the President for Economic Policy, and Assistant to the President for International Economic Policy. He was a principal on both the National Economic Council and the National Security Council. From 1995 to 1998, Tarullo was also President Bill Clinton's personal representative (sherpa) to the G7 group of industrialized nations. Immediately before joining the Clinton administration, he served as Chief Employment Counsel on the staff of Senator Edward M. Kennedy, and practiced law in Washington, D.C. He had previously worked in the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice and as special assistant to the Undersecretary of Commerce.

Between periods of government service, Tarullo has taught for more than fifteen years at Georgetown and Harvard law schools. He was also a visiting professor at Princeton and at the University of Basel. His scholarship ranges widely over the areas of financial regulation, international economic law, and administrative law. His book Banking on Basel warned of risks being created by the changes in financial regulation that were put in place in the decade preceding the 2008-2009 financial crisis.

LAMIDO YUGUDA
Director General
Securities and Exchange Commission of Nigeria

Mr. Yuguda brings to the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) more than three decades of experience as a central banker, economist, and investment manager.

Lamido Yuguda began his career with the Central Bank of Nigeria (CBN) as Senior Supervisor, Foreign Operations Department in 1984 with responsibility for maintaining Nigeria's external debt records.

He was redeployed to the Banking Supervision Department in 1985 to work on prudential regulation and bank licensing, and moved again in 1988 to the Debt Conversion Committee Secretariat to join the pioneer staff tasked with managing the Nigerian Debt Conversion Programme.

In 1992 he was reposted to the Foreign Operations Department where he rose through the ranks to become the Senior Manager, Investment Office with responsibility for external debt service and investment of the CBN's external reserves in a liquid portfolio of cash, fixed-term deposits, and foreign government treasury bills.

In 1997 he joined the staff of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) in Washington DC, USA as an economist in the Africa Department where he worked on the assessment of economic policies and management of balance of payment support programs in IMF member countries.

He returned to the Central Bank of Nigeria in 2001 where he was assigned the task of leading a staff team charged with restructuring and diversifying the CBN's growing foreign exchange reserve portfolio.

This resulted in the development and adoption of a new investment policy, the introduction of new asset classes, the appointment of a reputable global custodian and asset managers, the selection of a state-of-the-art portfolio management system, as well as the upgrading of the CBN's in-house fixed income trading and settlement capabilities.

Mr. Yuguda reached the pinnacle of his career at the Central Bank of Nigeria as Director of the Reserve Management Department from 2010 to 2016, where he inculcated a strong risk-aware investment culture and engendered a disciplined approach to investment evaluation. He retired voluntarily in 2016.

Mr. Yuguda has attended leadership training programmes at leading business schools including Harvard, INSEAD, IMD, Saïd, Wharton, Haas, and London. He is a Fellow of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Nigeria (ICAN) and a CFA charterholder.
